The Thrive approach is a trauma-sensitive, preventative method designed to support children's social and emotional development, within schools. It uses neuroscience, attachment theory and child development research to identify emotional needs and provide targeted, creative activities (art, play, storytelling) that build resilience and positive relationships.

Reaching new heights

Some lucky students enjoy a weekly session at Blue Spider climbing centre in Guildford each week. During these sessions, they enjoy roped climbing up to 10m, bouldering over crash mats and low-level traversing, all safely under the guidance of the experienced instructors. It has really built up their confidence & trust each week.

Dragons, dragons everywhere!

It's been dragons galore at Unified this week! The year 10s have started creating dragon eyes from Modroc & a new PD has started due to a student's new love of Dungeons & Dragons! Louis, in Thrive, was introduced to D&D through a recent TV series & has been hooked ever since!
